You have not got a clue.

One of four parties walked out of coalition talks. It might take a while to find a solution.

Probably not my finest tweet.

But it received this reply from Neil:

Facebook's pro-#Brexit bias

on 14.06.2016 in Brexit, Technology Edit

Bernd Hüttemann earlier pointed out to me that the mood section of the Facebook app for iOS has a mood "in favour of leaving the EU" but none in favour of remain. I scarcely believed it! But now I have checked it is true. I am using an iPhone 6S, with the latest version of the Facebook app (57.0), on iOS 9.3.2. Screenshots were taken at 1530 CET, 14th June 2016.

How Teens In The Balkans Are Duping Trump Supporters With Fake News

BuzzFeed News identified more than 100 pro-Trump websites being run from a single town in the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia.

Over the past year, the Macedonian town of Veles (population 45,000) has experienced a digital gold rush as locals launched at least 140 US politics websites. These sites have American-sounding domain names such as WorldPoliticus.com, TrumpVision365.com, USConservativeToday.com, DonaldTrumpNews.co, and USADailyPolitics.com. They almost all publish aggressively pro-Trump content aimed at conservatives and Trump supporters in the US.

Trumps Internettruppe

Wie Breitbart News in Deutschland Stimmung macht

Das rechtspopulistische Internetportal Breitbart berichtet über islamistische Unruhen in der Dortmunder Silvesternacht – auf Grundlage falscher Darstellungen. Ein Vorgeschmack.

innerhalb kürzester Zeit über 800 Mal geteilt und die Behauptungen wurden auch im Büro des Bundestagsabgeordneten Thorsten Hoffmann (CDU) gelesen. In einer Presseerklärung, die Hoffmann sofort verfasste, spricht er selbst von einem „Beschuss“ der Kirche. Auch der Bundespolitiker scheint auf die Falschmeldung reingefallen zu sein.

Karriere einer „linken“ Verschwörungstheorie: die angeblich unheimliche Macht der Algorithmus- Alchemisten von Cambridge Analytica

Erklärt der Magazin-Artikel über Cambridge Analytica den Wahlerfolg Trumps? Eher nicht

Über das vergangene Wochenende machte ein Artikel aus dem Schweizer Das Magazin Facebook-Karriere: „Ich habe nur gezeigt, dass es die Bombe gibt“ heißt der Text, in dem es um die angebliche Einflussnahme einer Big-Data Firma namens Cambridge Analytica auf die zurückliegende US-Wahl geht. Der Text schürt Ängste vor vermeintlich allwissenden Algorithmus-Alchemisten, greift aber zu kurz, wie einige kritische Anmerkungen im Netz zeigen.

The point of modern propaganda isn't only to misinform or push an agenda. It is to exhaust your critical thinking, to annihilate truth.

Everyday tech ethics

on 05.04.2018 in Technology Edit

A couple of months ago I had a conversation with two academic friends of mine about why they refused to use any messenger other than WhatsApp. "We just want it to work!" they said. "Well, Volkswagen cars work" I hit back. "That's different," they said. But then what about fairly traded or local or organic food? That was important to them. And buying things from non-oppressive regimes. Oh and renewable energy. You get the idea.

All of this – I argued – ought to be the way we think about our tech as well.

There are ethical choices – in terms of data protection, a company's ethics, the market dominance and (lack of) competition in a market, the tax regime enjoyed by a company, the location of a company's servers, how it deals with oppressive regimes etc. – that come with any choice of gadget or online service. Within this there are few absolutes – everything is a balance of the good and bad, as will become clear in this blog post.

I will explain how I have come to terms with these ethical questions and will propose solutions and my reasons. I'm self employed, so this tech works for me for both work and personal use, although the lessons here ought to apply more to personal use of tech. Of course feel free to disagree with me in the comments below!
